Cohn Gets a Writ Against Talmud

Thorah Jagersdorf Society.

Justice Cullen, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to-day granted Meyer Cohn an alternative writ of mandamus to compel the trustees of the Talmud Thorah Jagersdorf to show cause why they should not allow him to disinter the remains of his nephew, Isaac Cohn, who died Feb. 28 last, and was buried in Washington Cemetery at Parkville.

Cohn says the Society demanded $250 for the privileges sought. He wants to inter his nephew's body beside that of his father in another plot.

Just outside the window a gang of workmen was preparing a blast in the side wall of the old tunnels, which had been formerly used for cooking and storing beer. The building in course of demolition was Bechtel's Star Brewery. The Judge, with the others, for some time stood at the window to watch the result of the blast, but for some reason it failed to go off.

While the foreman went to make an inspection all, with the exception of Anthus, turned away and engaged in conversation. Anthus continued to look at the preparations, and it was fortunate for him and the others in the room that he did so. He heard the explosion and saw the air filled with flying rocks. An especially large rock was coming straight for the window. He sprang back, and at the same time gave the Judge and his fellow clerks a shove backward, which sent them out of reach of the coming missile.

The next instant a fragment of rock weighing fully ten pounds shot through the window and crashed against the side wall of the Judge's room, sending a shower of splinters and plaster on every one present. The Judge than ordered that the room should be locked and everything left undisturbed as evidence against the reckless blasters.

"Pie-mouth Adams" was fitty selected as umpire, and a youth simply known as "Beeswax" was called to keep score. Then the captains made a collection from their supporters, and each gathered a quarter of a dollar in pennies, which was made the stakes, and handed over to the umpire.

The game that they played was a wonderful inven ion, and must be taken up among the newest things fin-de-slee!e. There was no batting. The ball was laid on the ground and kicked with a rush by the player "at bat."

Then he had to run towards his adversaries about fifty feet and back again before the ball was fielded home or took him in the back of the neck.

The yelling that ensued could only have been touched by eighteen Arlie Lathams or two colored teans in a vacant lot.

The recort became widespread that the game was for money and blood, and imports were $97.247.

The imports, exclusive of specie, at the Port of New York, for the week were $6.50,238, of which $857.242 were dry goods and $5.762.966 general merchandise. For the corresponding week of 1893 the imports were $10.217.370, of which $1.546.991 were dry goods and $8.760.378 general merchandise.

The exports of specie to Europe this week were $6.609.673 gold and $439.016 silver, divided as follows: United States gold coin, $5.152.509; French gold, $1320.009; Spanish gold, $78.173; silver bars, $439.016. This shows that gold exports are $11-845.788 less and silver $13.761.947 more than in the corresponding period of 1893.
